In Go Down, Moses, Faulkner confronts his own growing convictions about race as a definite mark of what is meant by "the South." Robert Penn Warren once summed up the growing recognition of some white Southerners that every white child is born crucified to a black cross. This, in itself, was a significant advance in thought.

Go Down, Moses is a 1942 collection of seven related pieces of short fiction by American author William Faulkner, sometimes considered a novel. The most prominent character and unifying voice is that of Isaac McCaslin, "Uncle Ike", who will live to be an old man; "uncle to half a county and father to no one." Though originally published as a short story collection, Faulkner considered the book to be a novel in the same way The Unvanquished is considered a novel. Because of this, most editions no
